WASHINGTON NEWS.

Some Wild Rumors of Arthur's Cabinet Intentions.

Woman's Suffrage Again Before the Select Committee.

Telegram from Engineer Melville of the Jeannette.

CABINET GOSSIP.

NEW YORK, January 21.—The Times' editorial on cabinet matters says: The president has been credited with intending a good many foolish things, which he has so far abstained from doing. One of them was the appointment of Sargent as secretary of the interior, and though such selection is not beyond the bounds of possibility, it is daily becoming less probable. A similar remark applies to the appointment of W. E. Chandler as secretary of the navy, but perhaps the least probable of contemplated acts of folly ascribed to the president is the nomination of Conkling as secretary of the treasury, vice Folger, who would presumably be translated to the supreme court bench. Further rumor that Platt would be chosen to succeed Folger in the event indicated is so grotesquely absurd as hardly to deserve serious mention.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

There was a large attendance of ladies at the adjourned meeting of the senate select committee on the rights of woman to-day; and a large number of senators and representatives were present to see the chosen champions of the woman's suffrage cause and hear their arguments. Addresses were made by Matilda Joslyn Gage, Lillie Devereaux Blake, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Mrs. Sewell, Indianapolis, and Isabella Beecher Hooker. Mrs. Stanton's speech was elaborate and forcible. The hearing closed to-day, and the committee will now take the subject under advisement.

PENSIONS FOR PRISONERS.

The commissioner of pensions decides that soldiers captured in the line of duty and imprisoned by rebels and not since heard from, are presumed to be dead in line of duty. If found when captured and disabled when discharged from prison, the disability may be assumed to have occurred while they were in prison.

CONKLING AND THE TREASURY.

NEW YORK, January 21.—The Times' Washington correspondent says of the cabinet rumors: There are some who declare that the president would not consent in the proposition to make Conkling secretary of the treasury, because of public policy. Others, and some who are acquainted with the ex-senator's present views, say he wouldn't take the office if it should be offered to him; that he has retired from public life, and is engaged in building up a future by practicing his profession. Others would not be surprised if the office of secretary of the treasury should be offered to ex-Senator Platt.

TELEGRAM FROM MELVILLE.

WASHINGTON, January 21.—The secretary of the navy has just received the following telegram from Engineer Melville of the lost Arctic exploring steamer Jeannette:

IRKUTSK, January 18, '82.

To Secretary of the Navy, Washington.

SIR:—Melville, Danenhower and eleven men are all well. Melville returned to the Arctic ocean and found the log book, instruments and four records left by DeLong. No tidings of second-cutter, Lieutenant Chipp. Search will be continued during the winter by the Cossack commandants of Belum and Irkutsk under direction of General Ischernelff. Word has been received from Kalyma river that no boat had arrived to date Nov. 10. I am acquainted with the country where De Long and party are and request orders to remain with two men to renew the search in March; Danenhower and nine men to return to the United States. Danenhower's sight is partially recovered.

[Signed] MELVILLE.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The senate pension committee unanimously agreed to report a bill granting Mrs. Lincoln $15,000, available immediately, and increasing her pension to $5,000 per annum.

Col. W. A. Cook and A. M. Gibson have presented accounts to the department of justice for services rendered so far in connection with Star route cases. The amount of each account is $75,000.

Government prosecuting officers, who have been preparing information in Star route cases, have nearly completed their work and are only awaiting the consummation of the Guiteau trial to bring the matter before the grand jury.

THEATRICAL NEWS.

What Actors are Doing in New York—News of Interest.

NEW YORK, January 21.—There have been few changes made at the theatres this week. Lester Wallack appeared at the Park theatre in "The Colonel" supported by an English company. A brilliant audience was assembled, but in spite of Mr. Wallack's fine acting the piece fell rather flat. New Yorkers are not enough interested in æstheticism to thoroughly enjoy or appreciate a satire like "The Colonel."

The next event of special interest was the appearance of Signor Rossi in Alexander Dumas' drama, "Edmund Kean." Signor Rossi adopted the unique idea of making the audience itself assist in a portion of the play. Before the curtain rises on the fourth act the Prince of Wales, the Countess Kaefeldt, and other characters of the play took possession of a proscenium box in full view of the house, while other characters of the play seated themselves in the parquette. The curtain then went up on a scene in Hamlet with Kean on the stage. Seeing the countess with the prince Kean becomes mad with jealousy and broke out into a rage. The actors in the parquette and boxes hiss and cry, "take him off!" and several persons jump on the stage and Kean is carried away. The old prompter makes an apology to the actual audience, stating that Kean has lost his reason. The countess shrieks and faints and the act ends. Everything was cleverly managed at the Academy of Music, and the audience for a moment were startled and perplexed by the uproar, but quickly took the cue, and delighted with the novelty of the situation insisted upon recalling Signor Rossi and the principal artist supporting him. Signor Rossi occasionally broke out into English during the performance.

The Money Spinner was produced at Wallack's, Lewis and John Howson in the cast. It holds the boards but will give place on Monday next to Madame Gavari.

The death of Samuel Piercy has created a great deal of sympathy and sorrow, not only among his theatrical friends but among the numerous friends outside the profession.

Edwin Booth has sent Mr. Piercy's mother a check for $1,000.

Odetto will soon succeed the Passing Regiment at Daly's. The Passing Regiment will march on to its one hundredth performance and then will receive orders to march out on the road.

The Roman Students are at Koster and Bail's playing to a full house every night.

Mary Anderson is still at Booth's playing "Love" to crowded and enthusiastic audiences.

Roland Reed left Friday for San Francisco to join Sam Colville's "World" company.

The villa of Charles R. Thorne at Cohasset was purchased to-day for $15,000 by Stuart Robson. Thorne will remove to Newport. Robson purchased the property as a present for his daughter, Miss Alice Robson, who it is said, will in a short time retire from the stage and become the wife of a New York banker.

Chicago Court Decision

CHICAGO, January 21.—The decision of the supreme court declaring unconstitutional the probate courts of Cook and Lasalle counties has created excitement among lawyers and good deal of difference of opinion exists as to its scope. The first announcement of the decision created a good deal of alarm, but though it cause some trouble it seems not likely to entail any such grave consequences as were at first apprehended. The same opinion takes away the chancery jurisdiction of the county courts. This may trouble persons who obtained divorces from those courts but chancery business transacted by them has not been large. Thirty three hundred and ten wills have been probated in this court and the same number of estates are involved in the decision.

Stock Market.

NEW YORK, January 21.—The gold exporting point is 150¾. The advance in exchange yesterday was caused by the scarcity of commercial bills, coupled with the results of heavy selling of American securities for foreign account. Banks generally expect a fall in exchange. The Gould party talked bullish yesterday on almost everything except Western Union. A good many thought last evening that Gould put down the market yesterday. It is stated Gould has lately secured a good many stocks but he is in no hurry about bulling the market.

Mexican Southern

CITY OF MEXICO, January 21.—A concession has been granted the Mexican Southern railroad for colonization along its route. The government pays $35 per individual and $3 per family. Not less than five hundred families must be settled during the first five and two thousand the first ten years. Three fifths of the colonists must be Europeans. The company is negotiating the purchase of the Gehuacan railroad. General Grant's former offer for the Morelos road is now accepted, but the purchase has not been concluded.

Release of Irish Agitators.

LONDON, January 21.—Our Dublin correspondent telegraphs that the question of liberating Mr. Parnell and the other members of parliament will be debated at the forthcoming cabinet counsel in Dublin Castle. There is much difference of opinion on the subject, some persons high in authority favoring their immediate release. Quinn and Assistant Secretary Doriss, who had charge of the legal department of the league, and two or three clerks of United Ireland will be released immediately. Mr. Dillon's release may be looked for at any moment. In London there is a rumor that Mr. Parnell and the other imprisoned members of parliament were asked to give an understanding not to continue the land league agitation for a certain time. On refusing this they are not likely to be released to attend parliament.

Another Guiteau.

NEW YORK, January 21. Jas. B. Graves, who shot E. P. Soden, pleaded irresistible impulse. Dr. W. A. Gorman testified that he did not believe Graves was insane. He did not believe in insanity that comes when you put your finger on the trigger, and goes when you have killed your victim.

Shrewd Cranks.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 21.—Some excitement was occasioned by the discovery that incendiaries who fired the Feeble-Minded asylum last November, causing a loss to the state of four hundred thousand dollars, are Elmer Ellsworth Gwynn and David Goodrich, both inmates, aged respectively 17 and 18. They wanted to get away from the building, and the scheme was shrewdly planned and executed.

Paris Panicky.

LONDON, January 21. The Paris bourse is again rapidly falling. At 2 50 o'clock p. m. 3 per cent. rentes were quoted at 81f. Credit Foncier opened at 1565f., and is now 1490f.; Suez canal shares opened at 2300f., and are now 2060f. When the ordinary report in the middle of business hours was received, all international securities were lower, except Hungarian and Austrian, which were unchanged. The Lyons branch of the Union General is besieged. If the concern can meet its engagements mischief may be averted. If it has bourse liabilities beyond its powers still worse may be expected. Licensed brokers have stopped payment and bankers held a meeting Friday evening to consider the situation.

THE GUITEAU TRIAL.

The Assassin's Argument, by Which He Proposed

To Overcome the Jury and Secure Acquittal.

Successful Effort for Oratorical and Dramatical Effect.

Upon entering the court this morning Guiteau took a seat in the witness box, remarking as he laid out his papers: "I sit down because I can speak better, not that I am afraid of being shot. This shooting business is getting played out."

At an intimation from Judge Cox the prisoner carefully arranged his glasses and with a flourish began to read from manuscript as follows: "The prosecution pretends I am a wicked man. Mr Scoville and the rest think I am a lunatic, and I presume you think I am. I certainly was a lunatic July 2d, when I fired on the president, and the American people generally and I presume you think I was. Can you imagine anything more insane than my going to the depot and shooting the president? You are here to say whether I was insane or sane when I fired that shot. You have nothing to do with my condition since or before I fired the shot. You must say by your verdict sane or insane when the shot was fired. If you have any doubt of my sanity at that moment, you must give me the benefit of the doubt and acquit; that is, if you have any doubt whether I fired that shot or as the agent of Deity. If I fired it on my own account I was sane. If I fired it supposing I was the agent of Deity I was insane, and you must acquit. This is a record of the law as given in a recent decision of the New York court of appeals. It revolutionizes old rules and is a grand step forward in the law of insanity. It is worthy of this age of railroads, electricity and telephones and it is welcome from the progressive state of New York. I have no hesitation in saying it is a special providence in my favor, and I ask this court and the jury so to consider it.

Some eminent people of America think me the greatest man of this age and this feeling is growing. They believe in my inspiration and that Providence and I have really saved the nation another war.

My speech, setting forth in detail my defense, was telegraphed to all the leading papers and published Monday, and I am now permitted by His Honor to deliver it. Then he explained to the jury that his speech opened with a quotation from his Christmas greeting to the people, and in using it for the opening of his speech to the jury he had neglected to cut out the date, Christmas, 1881. After thanking his counsel and paying a very high compliment to the zeal and ability which Scoville had displayed, whom he proposed soon to reward with a very liberal fee, he extended his grateful acknowledgement to the court, the jury, the officers and the bailiffs, and last but not least to the American press. The latter were a power that generally criticised a man when they got down on him. They had been heavy on the prisoner at first, but when they knew his motives they changed their views and were now treating him very fairly.

With this introduction the prisoner took up his paper and proceeded to read to the jury his published speech. His manner to a casual observer seemed as completely self-possessed as usual, but behind his affected composure were intense feelings which were only held in control through his undoubted strength of will. His excitement was betrayed by a slight hectic spot on each cheek of his usually colorless face and by the unusual deliberation with which he began and for some time continued to speak. Whether this excitement was from the merely superficial effect upon his emotions naturally incident to the occasion, or whether it proceeded from the deeper or more overpowering influence of the true realization of his position as an almost convicted murderer, pleading for his life, it were difficult to decide. Whatever the original character of his feeling it finally gained ascendancy over his powers of control. As he reached that point in his speech, "I have always served the Lord and whether I live or die" he broke down, completely stopped, and tried to choke down the lumps in his throat, but found it impossible to keep back a genuine sob. Taking out his handkerchief he buried his face in it a few seconds, wiped his eyes, and with a determined effort started again. He seemed to recover his composure so quickly that some believed the whole effort was manufactured. Mrs. Scoville, (his sister), however, thought otherwise. She was deeply affected and wept and sobbed bitterly for some time after this incident. Guiteau continued to read, occasionally adding brief comments upon the text as he proceeded. All appearance of nervousness gradually wore off and with a composure and unction that bordered upon the ludicrous the prisoner read on with an attempt at every conceivable form of oratorical, rhetorical and dramatic effect. His description of the taking off of the president was given with striking effect. At times he closed his eyes or turned them heavenward, waved his body back and forth, sank his voice to a whisper or raised it to a high treble. At times the intensity of his utterances seemed to fence upon himself, but the effect was transitory, and with the exception of one instance there was no indication of breaking down. At frequent intervals he paused to emphasize some sentence or sentiment by repeating or commenting upon it. At one time, pausing, he leaned toward the jury and emphasizing with his hand and hands said "I tell you, gentlemen, just as sure as there is a God in heaven, if you harm a hair of my head this nation will go down in bloodshed. You can put my body up in a grave, but there will be a day of reckoning."

In the most natural manner imaginable Guiteau explained again that the reason he did not take Garfield away two weeks before he did was because he had no authority to remove Mr. Garfield. "When the time did come," he said in an airy tone, "I removed him gently and gracefully. The jury may put my body in the ground but my soul will go marching on. The slave holders put John Brown's body in the grave, but his soul goes marching on." Here he chanted most weirdly one stanza of "John Brown's body," closing with "Glory, glory, hallelujah."

Guiteau concluded his address at 12.35 and upon announcement by Corkhill that Judge Porter would be unable to speak to-day the court adjourned till Monday.

Wrecked Bark

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 21.—A Portland dispatch says Capt Maston, of the bark Harvest Home, reports his vessel went ashore on a sand beach ten miles north of Cape Hancock on the morning of the 10th. The vessel is high and dry at low tide. The crew removed the cargo ashore. The loss is attributed to a defective chronometer.

New Explosive

NEW YORK, January 21.—The Sun's reporter interviewed O'Donovan Rossa on the new explosive, xerotine sceatine. He said: This sceatine can be put in a bottle and is safe unless the bottle is cracked, then it explodes and burns. Skirmishers in England and Ireland have other materials besides bombs and torpedoes. Englishmen knew from the first that this explosive was used, and they sought to hide the fact. This sceatine is a terrible thing, worse than this, and Rossa showed a small iron bomb.

Effect of the Paris Panic.

NEW YORK, January 21.—Express says: Strange to say, Wall street bankers and brokers attach very little importance to the Paris crisis. They all admit the trouble can have no bad effect on the American stock market. On the contrary they are of the opinion that by weeding out wild cat schemes in France, capital will seek its regular channels in England and America.

Defaulting Lawyer.

CHEYENNE, January 21.—To-day in the district court Chief Justice Sever ordered the name of Charles A. Hoyt stricken from the roll of practicing attorneys for failing to pay over $3,087 entrusted him by clients. Hoyt has fled and was last heard from in New York city. He has also been indicted by the grand jury. There are two hundred and fifty dollars offered for his apprehension.

Dakota's Division.

WASHINGTON, January 21.—The sub-committee of the house committee on territories to-day heard arguments of delegates now in the city from Dakota Territory, in support of a bill providing the establishment of the territory of North Dakota, and providing a temporary government therefor.

For Threatening a Judge

OMAHA, January 21.—August Arndt was to-day convicted by the jury in the United States district court at Lincoln, for having made threats against the life of Judge Dundy, if he didn't decide in favor of Arndt a case in which Arndt was defendant. Judge Foster, of Kansas, presided. Sentence has not been pronounced. A motion for a new trial will be made. There is still strong suspicion against Arndt that he killed Col. Watson B. Smith, clerk of the United States court at Omaha.

Verdict Against Gould.

NEW YORK, January 21.—The court of common pleas gave a verdict to-day for $10,000 against Jay Gould in favor of W. H. Marston, who claimed to have been swindled by Gould while buying Erie stock.

Anti-Machine

NEW YORK, January 21.—A number of anti-machine republicans are about to organize after the Brooklyn Young Men's Republican club pattern. Many old heads are leading the movement, and the first meeting will soon be here at Chickering hall. It will be addressed by Joseph H. Choate, William M. Evarts, Henry E. Tremaine, E. W. Whitbridge, Dorman B. Eaton, Carl Schurz and Jackson J. Schultz.

Attempt to wreck Gould.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 21.—A German farmer living near Rockville, on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad, about seventy miles south of Sedalia, Mo., has been arrested charged with attempting to wreck a special train upon which Jay Gould and party were passing north on the 9th inst. It is said that he has had stock killed by trains and that his attempt to wreck the train was for revenge.

To Irishmen.

CHICAGO, January 21.—The Irish-American national executive committee suggest that in lieu of unseemly processions, banquets and regalias on next St. Patrick's day, the Irish in America assess themselves for what would be the cost of regalia, flags, music, etc., and transmit the amount at once to redeem the pledge of the quarter of a million dollars made at the Chicago convention. The address is signed by Michael Boland, chairman, and A. F. Brown, secretary.

The boiler of a saw mill at East Liberty, Ohio, exploded yesterday, killing one, wounding two dangerously and several others slightly.

Loren B. Sessions, of New York, has been granted leave to transfer his indictment for bribery from the Albany session to the Albany oyer, for trial.

HORTICULTURAL.

Regular Weekly Meeting of the El Paso County Society.

Interesting Paper on Plum and Cherry Trees by R. T. Crawford.

Discussion on Their Growth and Habits by the Members.

The president, Mr. Parsons, called the meeting to order. Mr. Cosson acted as secretary.

The regular business of the meeting being the discussion of the growth, habits and varieties of plums and cherries best adapted to the soil and climate of Colorado, the following article on cherries was read by Mr. R. T. Crawford of Colorado Springs.

THE CHERRY.

The common cherry tree (prunus cerasus) is of Asiatic origin, and is, I think, a native of Persia. It was introduced from there to Italy about 70 years before Christ, and about 120 years afterward was introduced into Great Britain. It is now extensively cultivated in the temperate regions of Europe and America. There are a great many different varieties. Over three hundred are now reckoned in the various catalogues, many of which are worthless for cultivation compared with the new and improved sorts. The branches are spreading, horizontal or slightly inclining upward in the larger class of trees and drooping in the smaller ones. They are generally divided by nurserymen into two classes, the Hearts and Bigarreaus or sweet cherries, and the Dukes and Morellos or sour ones. The former are strong vigorous growers with large leaves, and grow into large spreading heads or tops and are best suited for the purpose of shade. They produce large heart-shaped sweet fruit, varying in color from a light yellow to a dark purple.

The Dukes and Morellos are of a slow growth and do not ever attain so large a size, but are much more hardy and less liable to become injured by bursting of the bark and generally produce bright and round acid fruit. This is the class that is so much esteemed for cooking purposes. On dry soils this class of cherries is considered one of the most profitable fruits grown.

The cherry will thrive best on a dry sandy or gravelly soil and 'tis there it will attain its greatest perfection, but it does well in almost any situation excepting a wet one. I consider it one of the most ornamental of all fruit trees which, with its delicious fruit, beauty and shade makes it very desirable for planting near dwellings where all three of these objects are so much sought for. The cherry is best propagated by grafting on seedlings of the wild cherry of which there are several varieties, most of which are too well known to describe. (The choke cherry for instance.) The wood is much used in the manufacture of cabinet ware.

Although both classes are successfully grown in the eastern states I find that the Duke and Morello class are best adapted to the soil, climate and altitude of Colorado, although I know of several trees of the large class growing on our town site. They are, however, in sheltered positions and receive more than ordinary care. We have on our place somewhat over seventy-five trees growing all of the Morello class, and all composed of but two varieties which I consider the most profitable and reliable, viz: Early Richmond and Mt. Morency. There are several others of this class that I am satisfied will do well here, as Reine Hortense, Belle Magnifique, May Duke, Late Duke. These are all hardy and similar in growth. I am much pleased with the growth, averaging at least three feet in a season and remarkably healthy and free from blemish. I do not consider the Heart and Bigarreau class safe to plant here yet, although I think the time will come when they can be successfully grown, for I believe that here as in other parts of the country as civilization advances and trees are planted the climate will undergo a change more favorable to the growth of the tenderer varieties of fruit.

I do not consider that the cherry requires much pruning after the first two seasons, nor then unless it be to form the branches into low and spreading heads; afterward an occasional cutting out of any cross branches is all that is necessary. The best to transplant are two-year old trees, and they are usually from four to six feet in height.

I find, however, that some parties here have not met with success in making their cherry trees bear. I think the difficulty lies in forcing their growth by application of fertilizers and water, thus causing a luxuriant growth of wood and foliage, which prevents the formation of fruit buds. After your tree has attained bearing size, cease cultivating for awhile and thus check the growth and you will find that they will bear you good crops.

From my own experience and observations I consider the following varieties best adapted to our section and best to plant. The two first-named are much superior in size and quality to the others: Mt. Morency, Early Richmond, May Duke, Reine Hortense, Late Duke, English Morello.

Mr. Parsons thought that the cherry tree as a rule, was not as hardy as other fruit trees.

Messrs. Hogue, Crawford, Snyder and others present said that they did not think that the severity of last winter should discourage the planting of cherries, as the winter was an unusually hard one on all fruit trees.

It was generally agreed that too much water was the ill that many cherries suffered from; that they needed only about as much water as the grape.

Mr. Crawford said that after cherry trees were in full bearing he thought they should be cultivated very little.

Mr. Crawford read the following paper on

THE PLUM.

The plum is highly esteemed both as a dessert and cooking fruit. It is said that the origin of the cultivated varieties is Asia. There are in the United States many varieties of native or wild plums, many of which are greatly improved by cultivation. The trade in these native plums was at one time a large source of profit but the clearing up of the country has destroyed them as it has the native black berries. Many are brought into our markets here by ranchmen but they are generally poor and worthless and 'tis only the scarcity of fruits that makes any demand for them. The plum does not succeed in all localities as do generally apple, cherry and other fruits but we find it thriving best in special localities, many of which are hundreds of miles apart, as the wonderful plum region of western Canada bordering on the shores of Lake Huron and that of the Hudson river from Albany southward to the Catskill mountains, while in the intervening country but few varieties can be grown in large orchards successfully. The curculio and black knot are the most destructive enemies.

The plum reaches its greatest perfection on heavy soils, being there generally more free from black-knot or other diseases. Its greatest enemy is the curculio, a small dark-brown beetle with spots of yellow and black. The most simple method of protecting the crop from them is by spreading cloth beneath the trees as far out as the branches extend and then giving the tree a smart blow, which will jar off the insects, and in falling they are caught on the cloth. They are either killed then or gathered up with the punctured fruit that has fallen and destroyed.

Plum growing in Colorado is as yet in its infancy, although in some sections of the state there are many trees in bearing. It attains its greatest perfection here, as it is entirely free from disease, and the curculio has never made its appearance.

I do not think that all varieties can be grown here in El Paso county, but am convinced that the hardier sorts can, such as the Lombard, Gueye, Yellow Egg, Wild Goose and Miner. The last two are improved varieties of the Chickasaw or wild plum.

I am most favorably impressed with the Lombard, having some twenty-five trees growing on our place. These are perfectly free from blemish, the bark looking as if it had been rubbed and varnished, and the growth has been rapid and exceedingly healthy. I think will pass through the winter uninjured. There are several parties who have planted the cultivated sorts and they are doing well but know of none that have yet fruited, the Lombard and Gueye being the principal varieties. Of the native plums there are many trees in bearing here. The fruit of some is said to be very fine. While I would not recommend the tender sorts for this climate, I unhesitatingly recommend the Lombard and Gueye, of the improved sorts, and almost any of the natives that are worthy of cultivation, as being safe to plant here, and would say to all fruit growers plant the Lombard first of all for vigor of growth, hardiness and productiveness.

Mr. Ege spoke of the wild plums growing near town and told of how he last summer gathered them very rapidly, on Beaver creek, by putting a bucket between his knees and rubbing them off the branches of the trees.

Mr. Hogue said the Wild Goose and Miner were very much liked by Jesse Fraser and other fruit growers in Fremont county.

Messrs. Crawford and Parsons thought the soil in Shook's run admirably adapted to the growth of plums, the former stating that he thought the reason his plums were doing so well was because he had put them in heavy thick soil.

Mr. Cosson spoke of a tree in the garden of Mr. Wm. Bush of this city that bore a small crop of fine large plums last summer, and regretted he did not know its name. The plums were of a fine rich purple color and about the size of bantam hen eggs. As the tree grew well and appeared very vigorous, Mr. Cosson was in hopes the name of it could be ascertained.

Mr. Hogue spoke at some length of the State Horticultural society's late meeting, held at Denver, and stated that several of the members of that society had expressed to him a desire to at some early day hold a meeting at Colorado Springs. Mr. Hogue hoped that arrangements might be made to hold such a meeting during the month of February next.

Mr. Cosson said that if such a meeting were held here at all, he hoped that time enough would be taken to make a success of it. Very little could be done at short notice.

He suggested that the state society be invited to hold their regular June meeting here next summer, or to hold their next regular annual meeting in this city in January, 1883.

On Mr. Parson's motion it was decided that this subject should be considered at the next meeting.

Mr. Snyder was requested to prepare an article on currants and gooseberries to be read at the next meeting to be held on Saturday evening, January 28.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

Yesterday's Tribune contained a very tender tribute to Mr. Garick in Mr. Rothaker's letter from Chicago.

The people of Salida ought to give the Mountain Mail a generous support for the faithful and enthusiastic way in which it writes up the industries of that lively town.

(Telegraph editors, and readers too, for they have likewise suffered, will appreciate the following from the Boston Post:) "We're glad "Frelinghuysen is secretary of state. His "name will touch up the foreign editors just "as bad as Gortschakoff and the names of "some of their premiers have bothered us, "and revenge is sweet."

Ex-Governor Evans has broken loose again. He is in threatens disloyalty to the party of the lamented Lincoln, if a republican paper attacks his road. This is the worst kind of nonsense and should be promptly condemned by the republican party. The republican party last fall nominated a ticket for the city of Denver and county of Arapahoe without any reference whatever to Governor Evans or his quarrels in the newspapers. Because some newspapers that he did not like happened to support this ticket, he bolted it. It was an unreasonable and unpardonable bolt and was properly condemned at the polls. It will be this fall. The republican party has nothing whatever to do with the Denver & New Orleans or any other railroad.

We print elsewhere a letter from the Hon. H. A. Risley giving the inside history of the famous Hulsemann letter written in reply to Austria's haughty demands. This letter has been quoted, it will be remembered, to show that Blaine had an admirable precedent for the tone of his letter to Minister Lowell. The letter of Mr. Risley is of value as the authorship of this famous letter has never before been questioned. Our readers will thank the writer for this correction of history and ask for more such contributions. There are few men living whose associations with public men have been of so interesting a character as Mr. Risley's. The story of the visit of Webster to his home in 1851, a few months before Webster died and when his ambition for presidential honors was perhaps strongest should be preserved in more permanent form than mere tradition. Last Wednesday was observed as the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Webster, in New England and other parts of the country. It has called forth many reminiscences of Webster in the papers, but none are of so much interest or value as the story which Mr. Risley might tell of the visit of Mr. Webster to Dunkirk on the occasion of the opening of the Erie road, when he entertained him at his home. Mr. Risley also had the privilege of being the confidential advisor of Chase throughout his administration of our finances during the war, and was besides the life long friend of Seward. His intimate associations also with Lincoln, Fessenden and other prominent figures in the rebellion era gave him inside knowledge of important events which should now be written history. We speak of this that our readers may join with us in asking for more and frequent contributions of this character.

Gambetta may be unsuccessful in carrying out his reforms, but his courage in pressing them is commendable. Gambetta is a leader of public opinion rather than merely a follower or reflector of it. He therefore undertakes some very great constitutional reforms. France passed from an imperial to a republican government in a day. Necessarily the latter form of government has been an experiment. Any extensive reforms would have been unwise until now, because experience was needed to point out clearly the deficiencies in the present constitution. Gambetta has made a careful study of the workings of the constitution, and the changes he proposes are largely included under the term scrutin de liste which most papers have been careful not to define. From the context of the dispatches of the past week, we may understand that it contains very much more than is contained in the literal meaning of this term. It covers the general subject of elections, defining how deputies and senators may be elected and who shall vote. Gambetta requires that this shall be inscribed in the constitution so that it may not be easily changed. One of the most important changes is that in regard to the election of senators. At present the senate consists of three hundred members, of whom seventy-five are life members. The senate by election keeps this number full. The other senators are elected not unlike our own, except that the electors are chosen especially for this purpose, while our electors are the state legislatures. Gambetta's bill provides for the election of life senators by both chambers instead of the senate alone. The others are elected as before except that each senatorial elector is elected directly by the people instead of by communes. The reforms are all of a popular character, and carry out more fully the principle of universal suffrage.

LITERARY.

The Atlantic Monthly for February is at hand. The usual variety and excellence of contents tables "The Bay of Seven Islands," John Greenleaf Whittier. Not, perhaps, equal to his best, but still Whittier. "Some Traits of Bismarck," by Herbert Tuttle, who plays the part of valet to the hero, and with the usual result, the hero is not perhaps as much of a hero as before the performance at the same time he is willing to give justice and at times admiration to the hero. "An Echo of Passion," by George Parsons Lathrop, chapters four and five, who is going on [illegible] vivisection which [illegible] such operations is more interesting to the student than to the subject. Alas, it is true, and poetical and quite probable, unlike many romances. "Studies in the South" is a series of studies, sketches and pictures, with some spice and variety, and altogether very pleasant reading.

"The Refunding Bill of 1881," will prove interesting to politicians and financiers, although a little dry to the general reader.

"Tom's Husband," is a curious little tale of apparent contradictions in character, but not unfaithful to life after all, for often it is the impossible which happens. And a bit of poetry by the author of the Echo of Passion called "In the Silent, the Silent November." Like a fly in amber its value is its company and setting.

"Richard Grant White," by E. P. Whipple, is a most readable and just critique upon the character, idiosyncracies and writings of the writer whose name appears in its title. Mr. Whipple could hardly write an ungrateful thing, and the generous way in which he puts on the gloves for this much-read and admired and greatly abused critic of English and Shakespeare is very taking in these days of sheep-over-a-fence criticism. Mr. Whipple takes the opportunity of "having his pen in hand" to pay a gracious compliment to other writers whose time, talents and trainings have for the most part found expression in the daily labors of journalism, educating the masses and delighting the readers. Yet leaving their names "writ in water" as far as the gathering together of their work into tangible and responsible form. Notably among these is mentioned George William Curtis, "represented to-day by a few volumes as a writer," and yet whose delicate and comprehensive mind has done so much to cultivate and educate popular opinion upon the great questions of the day. [By the way why don't he publish a selection of his editorials?] Hawthorne, Emerson and others come in for a share, and after all Mr. White gets but a share, although a good one, of the paper.

"Ember Days," by Edith Thomas, reminds one of a picture where the woods are brown, and the earth is brown and the snow is light, and through the half denuded trees steals a glimpse of late sunshine, like "four o'clock of a winter afternoon." It is named in the catalogue "The year smiles as it draws near death." If Edith Thomas has not seen the picture she has seen what the artist saw. The earthy smell of moss, the trickle of the little stream only as yet fringed with ice, the late frosted but still smiling flowers, the chirp of squirrel, and the drop of his nut, or the nameless and mysterious sounds of the deserted forest, the pale sunshine smiling over the damp chilly ground on whose brown carpet one dares no longer sit. The rich sepia tints of the picture might make us, denizens of the mountains, very homesick for one more such stroll, and the sketch is full of genuine poetry which the writer has had too delicate taste to put into verse.

"The House of a Merchant Prince," 1, 2 and 3 chapters (another novel of American life, which promises to be interesting, and in not altogether hackneyed way), by William Henry Bishop. "Northern Travel," which is itself a review and criticism of two new books: "Schwatka's Search, Sledging in the Arctic," by Wm. H. Gilder, second in command, Chas. Scribner & Sons, 1881, and "The Land of the Midnight Sun," by Paul B. Du Chaillu, Harper Bros., 1882, and two or three other volumes: "The Story of a Scandinavian Summer," which seems to us rather the pleasantest part of the affair, and "The Land of the White Elephant," which at the present geological epoch, at least, is a decided contrast. "Dramatic Literature" contains a good many pleasant things, a good many of them new and all of them interesting. It is said that "all the world loves a lover," and most of us have, however dignified we may behave about it, at least a "sneaking kindness," for the player craft, and it is pleasant to know among other things that our grandfathers were amused with the grandfather and great grandfather of the inimitable Jefferson, and all sorts of interesting collections concerning the dramatic profession.

"Daniel Webster," by Henry Cabot Lodge, a biographical and historical review of the life and acts of the great statesman, doing full justice to his genius, his stately grandeur, and not creating a demi-god out of what was only a great and also a faulty man.

"Origin of Crime in Society," by Richard L. Dugdale, a very sensible article setting forth at length and in detail the propriety of locking the stable door before instead of after the horse is stolen.

"The Contributors' Club," by no means up to the usual standard and apparently getting rather tired of each other, and a quantity of clever book notices conclude the number.

THE LIFE OF GUISEPPE GARIBALDI, BY THEODORE BENT, B. A., OXON, ILLUSTRATED.

This work, in good type, fair paper, with several well executed illustrations and portraits in wood, is cleverly begun by an introduction in which a bird's eye view of his character and career are in part set forth in a pleasant and readable style, and the difficulties of writing history are manifestly shown by a few statements of most conflicting testimony concerning this extraordinary man, whose eventful and romantic career is fresh in the memories of most of us, and who still lives at this writing.

The writer characterizes the hero as an "eminently simple and straightforward character, brave and masterful in fighting but doing it best under orders." A splendid colonel of cavalry, but a poor general, and a total failure as a statesman, full of noble ideas yet ignorant and negligent of important details (a most common fault in your leader of gallant forces it seems). He led the people and did great things with them but his work was done when the battle was over. Like most true heroes, while he was the bravest man before his mortal foe, that ever set lance in rest, he was the gentlest man that ever sat at meat in faith with Italia. United Italy was his dream and his life's purpose; born with and fostered by Mazzini [illegible] nerve of his being responded to the chord whenever or wherever touched, and as the writer says, "making of him by turns a hero and a Don Quixote," believing that to obtain universal distinction it is not necessary to unify language. He appears as a solitary boy, fond of mountain climbing, and boating, and swimming; meeting with adventures with pirates, and feeling an early interest and sympathy with plots and plans and discontent wherever the grand rallying sign of the "United Italy" was given, making a romantic marriage with (strange to say!) exactly the right woman for such a man, with only the slight objection of a previous betrothal, some say marriage, to another man. "For," as Garibaldi says, "it is a pity that two hearts bound as ours are should be the cause of sorrow to some poor innocent man." With improving fortune and fame, however, Garibaldi was forgiven this slight irregularity and this brave, strong, beautiful woman supplemented the heroic character of Garibaldi (who, like many another hero, had certain weak spots in his character) and endured hardships and suffering which seem more like the romances of the middle ages than the grave statements of contemporary history. And so, from victory to victory, through toil and disappointment, goes on the life of Garibaldi, for it is no romance, certain to end well, but a veritable man of the nineteenth century, who after siege, battle, assault, and every variety of possible experience, wounds and suffering and prison, not to be forgotten or omitted, at last joins in the victorious entrance of Victor Emmanuel into his kingdom—United Italy—at last.

We have also received from the Franklin Square Library the following novels:

"God and the Man," by Robert Buchanan, author of "A Child of Nature," etc.

"The Senior Partner," by Mrs. J. H. Riddle, author of "A Life's Assize," etc.

"The Captain's Room," by Walter Besant and James Rice.

"About Webster's Famous Letter."

For the Gazette.

In a paper upon Daniel Webster in the Atlantic for February the author says "the only event of his second term of office in the cabinet was the famous Hulsemann letter. The Chevalier Hulsemann wrote in a very offensive manner to Mr. Webster, remonstrating against the official inquiry directed by the United States government in regard to the Hungarian revolution. The letter merited rebuke, and Mr. Webster administered it in a way which he himself calls 'boastful and rough.' Severe, and justly so, it certainly was; but the boastful passage which at the moment so caught the popular fancy, was hardly justifiable, in point of taste, in a state paper, and was unworthy of Mr. Webster."

It was my good fortune to have Mr. Webster and his son Fletcher as guests for a few days in the summer of 1851. Fletcher was, or had been, assistant secretary in the state department. He was seriously ill at my house occasioning much anxious solicitude to his father and was frequently a subject of conversation between us. In one of those free conversations of a morning drive Mr. Webster said: "Fletcher thinks he should be a great man himself, if he had not a great man for a father, and in fact—" continued he, "Fletcher is a man of rare abilities and attainments. It is but just to him to say that the state paper that has attracted the most attention of any during my term and added most to my reputation, the Hulsemann letter, was prepared by Fletcher. I made but very little change in his original draft." H. A. R.

LITERARY NOTES.

Jessie Benton Fremont is writing a play for John McCullough.

Mr. George Dolby will publish next season his reminiscences of Charles Dickens.

It is currently reported, though we cannot say on how good authority, that Mr. Henry James, Jr., closely resembles the prince of Wales.

Scribner & Welford will soon bring out a new series of illustrated biographies of great artists similar to the previous series, but with fewer plates and cheaper.

Every library should try to be complete on something, if it were only the history of pinheads.—[Oliver Wendell Holmes, the Poet at the Breakfast Table. VIII.

The Tile club, it seems, have discovered the sea serpent and have taken his likeness for the midwinter number of the Century. What could the sea serpent have thought of the Tile club.

President Arthur's designation of the United States as "the great pacific power" of the future is one of those happy striking phrases which express a volume, and it is certain to pass at once into the currency of speech.

Everybody at Boston wants to see "Owen Innsley," the new poet, who is not a man but a woman, a Miss Jennison, daughter of a Boston lawyer, and niece of Mrs. Thaxter's husband; but she has modestly slipped out and gone abroad.

Professor Bryce, of Oxford, the historian of the Holy Roman empire was the author of the article on Mr. Gladstone, which not long ago appeared anonymously in Scribner's. He has written a companion article on Lord Beaconsfield which will shortly be published in the Century.

The serial now running in the St. Nicholas, "Recollections of a Drummer Boy," has brought out the interesting coincidence that author and illustrator of that story were both in the battle of Gettysburg and on opposite sides, near enough to be "just across the fence from each other." It is enough to make the young folks now reading the serial very glad about that fence—otherwise there might not have been the story.

One of the facts apparently substantiated by Dr. Draper in his recent work on "King's Mountain and its Heroes" is that Major Andre was twice guilty of theft; once, while stationed in Philadelphia, stealing from the library of the university a complete set of "L'Encyclopedie" which was a present from the French academy by the hands of Franklin; and again taking from Franklin's residence, which he occupied for a season, a portrait of that philosopher.

The news of the illuminati of Boston seems to be good, Mr. Longfellow recovering, although under temporary [illegible] from his late illness. Mr. Whittier [illegible] of head and [illegible] body. Mr. Emerson [illegible]. Dr. Holmes [illegible] ever. "May he live a thousand years and his shadow never be less and done with his friends and make his good speeches [illegible] the immortals.

Among the noteworthy features of [illegible] "Pen Pictures of Modern Authors," the second volume of "The Literary Life" series, will be [illegible] "A Day at Longfellow's Home," Justin McCarthy's "Visit [illegible]," [illegible] "An Hour with Tennyson," George William Curtis' "Reminiscences of Hawthorne," [illegible] "Visit to Tennyson," with other sketches, anecdotes and reminiscences by personal friends or acquaintances of George Eliot, Ruskin, Emerson, Bryant, Walt Whitman, O. W. Holmes, Matthew Arnold, [illegible], "Ouida," Dickens, Bulwer and Disraeli. The Publishers will have the book out early in February.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have had a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year over the following facts: That Mr. James's "Portrait of a Lady" is in its fourth edition; that Mr. Scudder's "Children's Book and Bodley [illegible]" have been [illegible] from the outset; that two editions of Dr. Holmes's poems complete have disappeared like a Boston snow-ball before a south wind; that Bayard Taylor's illustrated "Home Ballads" proved a most popular book, which fact means a nice royalty to Mrs. Taylor; that Grant White's "England Without and Within" has reached its fourth thousand and is still rapidly selling over the water; that the Longfellow "Birthday Book" is in its seventeenth thousand, and the Emerson and Whittier are both in the ninth; and that Mr. Fawcett's "A Gentleman of Leisure" is also in its ninth thousand. New successes in preparation are Mr. Scudder's "Noah Webster," Mr. Charles Amory's "Life of Copley," and a volume of "Studies in the South" by the author of "Certain Dangerous Tendencies in American Life." Mr. Howells has been up before the police court; but as a spectator only, as his contribution to the January Atlantic shows.

PERSONAL.

Olive Wilde's first at home in New York was a joy forever to the extent of $1,400.

Mme. E. Rudersdorff, the vocalist, is afflicted with cancer and is very ill at her home in Massachusetts.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes makes an appeal for the endowment of the Harvard Medical school. He says that five or six professorships are needed, and that an endowment of $50,000 would insure at least five.

The king of Sweden will have no guards at his country house. "The soldiers are for the country, not for me," he said to Du Chaillu, "I would rather not be king if obliged to keep soldiers watching over me."

A portrait of Hon. James Russell Lowell has lately been painted by Mrs. Anna Lea Merritt. He is represented as wearing the red robe which he donned at Oxford when his honorary degree was conferred upon him.

The late Senator Warner held a policy for $5,000 in an accident insurance company. Young Mr. Park Valentine, who, with his bride, was killed on the same train, had a policy for $7,500 in the same company.

Ex-Governor Jewell gave a dinner at his Hartford home the other day to Archibald Forbes. The latter's lecture at Hartford was attended by all the chief dignitaries of the state, from the governor down. Mr. Forbes paid a high compliment to the manly bearing and the drill of the Connecticut regiment he recently saw during its visit to Charleston, S. C.

It is a coincidence that the artist who is illustrating Mr. Keiffer's "Recollections of a Drummer Boy," which are running as a serial in St. Nicholas, fought through the war on the confederate side, and that his regiment was immediately opposed to Mr. Keiffer's at Gettysburg, and he witnessed the scrimmage for the colors of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Pennsylvania regiment, described in the January St. Nicholas.

The Gould papers are complaining that the Rio Grande people were ungrateful to Gould at the time of the victory over the A., T. & S. F. Mr. Gould was given a block of the stock so that he could have made a million or so. That ought to have been enough. But these Gould papers think the road should have been given to Mr. Gould. The question may here occur to some, what were the Rio Grande people trying to obtain possession of their property for? To give it to Jay Gould?

Alice and Santa Claus

William H. Howells, in Lippincott's.

Dear little Alice, may her joys increase,
Awoke one night, and near the mantelpiece
Beheld old Santa Claus, with bag and box,
Quite busily engaged in filling socks,
Delightedly she lifted up her voice—
That childish treble made his heart rejoice—
And said: "Dear Santa, I have waited long
To talk to you; and have I, then, done wrong?"
"Not so," the saint of Christmas said, and smiled,
While a soft radiance fell upon the child.
"Not so; for those alone my face may see
Who very good and noble strive to be.
Speak then, my child. What is thy quest with me?"
Then answered Alice: "I cannot forget,
Dear Santa Claus, a little girl I met,
Ragged and homeless, and with eyes so sad
That my poor heart has never since been glad.
Take them to her, dear Santa Claus, I pray,
All the rare things you brought for me to-day;
Take them to her, brighten her eyes of blue,
And say these presents came from me and you."
Then sleep quite overcame the little maid;
Back on the pillow her round cheek was laid.
Old Santa vanished; but an angel fair
Bent softly down and kissed her golden hair.

An Early Spring Picture.

Oscar Wilde.

Full winter: and the lusty goodman brings
His load of faggots from the chilly byre,
And stamps his feet upon the hearth, and flings
The sappy billets on the waning fire,
And laughs to see the sudden lightning scare
His children at their play; and yet—the spring is in the air:

Already the slim crocus stirs the snow,
And soon yon blanched fields will bloom again
With nodding cowslips for some lad to mow,
For with the first warm kisses of the rain
The winter's icy sorrow breaks to tears,
And the brown thrushes mate, and with bright eyes the rabbit peers

From the dark warren where the fir cones lie,
And treads one snowdrop under foot, and runs
Over the mossy knoll, and blackbirds fly
Across our path at even, and the suns
Stay longer with us; ah! how good to see
Grass-girdled spring in all her joy of laughing greenery

Dance through the hedges till the early rose
(That sweet repentance of the thorny briar)
Burst from its sheathed emerald and disclose
The little quivering [illegible] fire,
Which the bees know so well, for with it come
Pale boys-love, sops-in-wine and daffodillies all in bloom.

Dear bride of nature and most beauteous spring
That can'st give increase to the sweet-breath'd kine,
And to the kid its little horns, and bring
The soft and silky blossoms to the vine,
Where is that old nepenthe which of yore
Man got from poppy-root and glossy-berried mandragore!

French Corner.

Blase originally meant to express the condition of an edged tool, which, through improper use, has totally lost its sharpness. Figuratively it is applied to persons, to express the condition of one who, through the abuse of pleasure and all the good things of this world, has late enthusiasm and has become indifferent.—This meaning originated among artisans who naturally compared the condition of such a man with that of a blunt tool. He is blase.—Parisians and New Yorkers become blase very young.

Coquette and coquetterie are essentially French and are by no means analogous to to flirt or flirting. These two words, coquette and coquetterie belong exclusively to the fair sex, while the English words, flirt and flirting are applied both to men and women. Coquetterie is a strong desire, natural with the fair sex to exhibit good taste, to please either by winning magnets, by dressing well or by other little attentions. Coquetterie in a moderate form is very commendable in a lady while flirting is despicable.

Recherche refers mainly to manners, dress, and is almost synonymous with distingue. In fact recherche is distingue minus the intellectual refinement; for example, an actor might appear quite recherche on the stage, thanks to the good manners and to the becoming costume which he borrows for the circumstance, but he is far from being distingue. His true character stands out even through his fine raiments; the quality of distingue would be visible even through poor garments. It has dignity and is a part of the character. The expression, "a party is recherche" is not correct or in good taste. Chic refers more to things. When it refers to persons it means pleasing, odd, fashionable, rather than distingue. Chic was originally a term of artists and was used to express special skillfulness with the crayon and with the brush.

Cachet is said of persons and things and is somewhat synonomous with chic; cachet, however, demands more originality than chic. A person has some cachet who dresses with good taste and different from anyone else.

The Denver Republican says: "A very erroneous idea prevails as to the relative strength and capabilities of the broad-gauge and narrow-gauge engines, the impression being that the former can haul twice as many tons as the latter. In reality the broad-gauge engines are in all respects the same as the narrow-gauge engines of the "Mogul" pattern, all their parts being interchangeable. The broad-gauge engines are simply mounted on broader frames, and this frame—and not any of the essential parts—makes them weigh just one ton more. The fact is the narrow-gauge engines, having less dead weight to haul, are more effective than the broad-gauge engines. The former can haul but thirteen 12-ton freight cars over the Rio Grande road, while the latter haul seventeen 12-ton freight cars each, an advantage of forty-eight tons over the broad-gauge engines. The dead weight of broad-gauge freight cars capable of carrying twelve tons is eleven tons, and of the narrow-gauge cars is but six tons. All the narrow-gauge freight cars carry twelve tons.

Chat by the Way.

It is possible for a man to know just what he means to say and yet not be able to express it, as, for instance, when the Hibernian conductor said, "Sir, if you are going to smoke on this car you must get off to do it."

When you feel that you really must "take something," said an enthusiastic temperance lecturer, "just take a walk."

A German told the truth by accident on a certain occasion, and it is barely possible that we might repeat his words. "You go right along," he said, "until you come to a fence with a hole in it, then after a while to a house with a great pig in the yard. Dot's me."

Punctuation is sometimes necessary to the proper rendering of a sentence. The Cincinnati Dollar Weekly Commercial

AN EIGHT-PAGE, FIFTY-SIX COLUMN FAMILY NEWSPAPER,

Printed from Large, Clear, New Type—Publishes more Reading-matter for the money than any other Newspaper in the Country, the issue of each week containing over TWENTY-TWO SQUARE FEET OF PRINTED MATTER, and is not surpassed for News, Business Reports, Literary and Select Reading.

Each person sending us one dollar, including those renewing their subscriptions, will receive the Dollar Weekly Commercial one year and the book they may pick out from the following remarkable list—postage paid and FREE OF ALL COST—the books being unabridged and handsomely printed in paper cover.

"VENNOR'S WEATHER ALMANAC FOR 1882." Written expressly for the United States by Professor HENRY G. VENNOR, the noted Weather Prophet, with forecast of the weather for 1882. The work contains not only the probabilities for the month, but the subdivisions showing the probabilities for each week. This almanac is filled with most interesting matter prepared by Professor VENNOR, and contains nearly one hundred pages, with illustrations and illuminated covers.

"ENDYMION." This is the latest production of the Earl of BEACONSFIELD—a work with which he cannot know if when thrown out of power by the Tory rats, led by Mr GLADSTONE. It is the most famous novel of the day.

"LIFE OF CHRIST." By Fred'k W. FARRAR, D. D., F. R. S., late Fellow of Trinity College, Master of Marlborough College, and Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen. Canon FARRAR bases his history upon an independent study of the four Gospels, side by side. In addition he has consulted each of the writings of the learned Jewish Rabbis, and the best and richest sources of information elsewhere. His book is a succession of beautiful and eloquent thoughts, clothed in perfect language.

"A TREATISE ON THE HORSE AND HIS DISEASES." By Dr. B. J. KENDALL. A book of nearly one hundred pages, with numerous engravings. It contains an index of diseases of the horse, and gives the symptoms, cause, and best treatment of each; a table, with an engraving of the horse's teeth at different ages, with rules for telling the age; and much other valuable matter. It is one of the simplest and at the same time a thorough and comprehensive work. Valuable to every horse owner.

"IVANHOE." This is the grandest of the glory of the "Waverly Novels"—a classic that all should read—a story above competition and beyond criticism.

"SOCIAL ETIQUETTE AND HOME CULTURE." A book of value to young people in the country who desire to inform themselves of the usages of polite society, and to provide for the improvement of the opportunities that even the humblest homes afford.

"MUDDY PAPERS." The newest of the books all things considered, of George Eliot, who was the foremost writer of her time. The recent death of the author increases its general interest, and its fascination gains with repeated readings.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE." We are not aware that that book was ever before offered as a true prize. It is a book for boys fond of adventure, and possesses an everlasting charm.

"ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS." BURNS, GOLDSMITH, BUNYAN. We have here the finest collection of first-class biographical literature ever seen in the same space. Each life is a story richer than many novels.

"MIDSHIPMAN EASY." Marryat's jolliest tale of the sea—The sailor boy's own book.

It will be noticed that our selection of prizes covers an extraordinary range and variety of the brightest and best books.

OMAHA & DENVER SHORT LINE.

Its Convenience to Colorado Business Men.

Commencing Sunday, November 6, 1881, the Union Pacific company will run a fast Omaha express through between Denver and Omaha daily, over the recently constructed Julesburg cut-off:

Leaving Denver (breakfast)	8.00 a. m.
Arrive at Sterling (dinner)	1:30 p. m.
Arrive at North Platte	7:40 p. m.
Arrive at Omaha	7:30 a. m.
Arrive at Council Bluffs (breakfast)	8:00 a. m.
Arrive at Chicago (Chicago time)	6:30 a. m.

Time, Denver to Omaha, twenty-three and one-half hours; time, Denver to Chicago, forty-six hours.

This new route is 186 miles shorter than any rival, six hours the quickest to Omaha, seven to fifteen hours the quickest to Chicago, St. Louis and all points east, and it runs the finest trains over built constructed by the Pullman company expressly for this line. They embody every feature of safety, convenience and luxury yet attained in railway equipment. It is the only through line possessing a water grade across the plains (averaging less than ten feet to the mile). It is the most picturesque route, has the best dining stations, the heaviest steel rails, best iron bridges and most careful ballasting.

Passengers from Leadville, Gunnison, San Juan and all points in southern Colorado make close connection in the Union depot, Denver, and arrive in Chicago and all eastern cities soas to have a full day for business on the day of arrival, practically saving from twelve to twenty-four hours, and avoiding all night changes.

Meantime the old Kansas Pacific route, now Kansas division Union Pacific railway, to Kansas City and all points east and southeast, and the Pioneer Union Pacific route from Denver, via Cheyenne, to Omaha and the east and northeast, maintain their usual standard of excellence. Tickets via Cheyenne are good over the new route, or vice versa. 1-13-tf
